SWEEPSTER BIG HELP TO STATE'S BREEDING

By J. W. MARCHBANK

That the progeny of the stallion Sweepster, which is standing at my Heather Farm, are of the winning kind has been demonstrated many times on the tracks of this country and of Canada. A late showing of note by a Sweepster was the victory of the three year old Monsweep in the King's Plate at the Woodbine course, Toronto. The race, at one mile and one furlong, brought together a field of thirteen Canadian-breds and Monsweep scored in easy style. It was the seventy-seventh running of the historic event. As Monsweep toted 117 pounds, it looks as though weight has no terrors for the gelding.

On the same afternoon the two year old colt Goldlure, also a Sweepster, was best in a scramble for the babies, negotiating four furlongs in fast time.

As is well known, Sweepster, a clever performer in his racing days, is of blood lines that commend him wherever he goes. For a number of years he was at a Canadian nursery; last year his owner, H. C. Hatch, had him at Versailles, Kentucky, and in the breeding season just closed he was at Heather Farm. The high estimation in which I hold the stallion is shown by the sending of ten of my best mares to his court.

A fine individual, Sweepster is a worthy representative of the noted Sweep line, than which there is none better anywhere in the world. His dam, Oktibenna, is by the Triple Crown winner Rock Sand from Octoroon, a daughter of Hastings. The bood flowing in Oktibenna's veins is similar to that of Man o'War. It will be recalled that Man o'War is by a son of Hastings, from a daughter of Rock Sand.

It is hoped on all sides the employment of such stallions as Sweepster in the nurseries of the state will lead gradually to the betterment of the class of the horses racing at the various tracks. Up to this time it must be said there has been an over-abundance of ordinary performers and a paucity of good ones reared on the home farms. That situation must be changed in order to insure the permanence of the sport in California.

BONUS CENTS OR SENSE?

(By A. G. K. Jakobsen)

By this time most of us know that we must stay home or at whatever address we gave the U. S. Facility Administration in applying for our bonus, every evening between 5 and 12 midnight, starting June 15 until we have received our bonus. That it will be delivered registered and that we must have present two witnesses who can identify us. Then if we wish to cash them we can take them either to the War Memorial building or to a post office, to be signed over by the Veteran in the presence of witnesses and left there, after which a check will be sent for the amount requested.

Now the question is: Will these dollars be spent like cents or will the Veteran use sense in his spending? There has been a great deal of discussion on this subject by opponents of the bonus. The Veterans of this last war are composed of all classes, creeds and colors, so our opponents can't expect any more from bonus holders than from a mixed group of men in ordinary life. There will be many tempted to celebrate too freely, with men and women vultures encouraging them and then rolling them for what's left. Here's where the Legion can help. If we see such a thing, help your comrade—if necessary have an officer of the law take him in hand until such time as he regains his faculties. Give common sense advise when they want to foolishly spend this hard fought for bonus, reminding them that it should be put away as a nest egg if possible.

The latter part of last week all comrades, whom I had not contacted to give silver set tickets to sell, received twelve each in their monthly bulletin envelope. Comrade Strohmaier put in a complaint, wanting to know where the other fifty tickets were. I assure you that he got fifty more. How many more comrades feel the same way as Comrade Strohmaier? Like to hear from them.

CONGRESSMAN TO SEEK NOMINATION FROM DEMOCRATS

The following communication from Congressman P. J. McGrath is self explanatory:

The Editor,
Daly City Record,
Daly City, California,
My dear Edtor:

Somehow an erroneous impression has been created in regard to my filing only for the Democratic nomination for Congress. I intend to avail myself of the privilege enjoyed in California by members of all parties during the past twenty years, and will file for the Republican as well as for the Democratic nomination.

I have received hundreds of letters from Republicans all over my district asking me to file for that party's nomination, and in fairness to all my constituents I am making it possible for any of them to vote for me at the primaries.

Very sincerely,
JOHN J. McGRATH, M. C.

Report of the Annual Meeting of the First Church Of Christ, Scientist

BOSTON, Mass., June 8—An appeal to Christian Scientists to work for the demonstration of World Peace, the reading of reports by church officers on the various activities of the movement throughout the world and sustained demand for the writings of Mary Baker Eddy, Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, marked the annual meeting today of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

Approximately 6000 Christian Scientists representing every state in the Union and practically every civilized nation in the world attended the meeting. The main floor and three galleries were filled within a short time after the church doors were opened, the overflow being accommodated in the original Mother Church where amplifiers were installed.

Introducing the theme of World Peace, William P. McKenzie, for the past year chairman of the Board of Directors, told the audience, "There is a rising demand in the hearts of men for freedom and justice. Can it be met by fair dealing? This requires self-government, does it not? Instead of battling with others to set them right, let a man become right himself and influence his neighbor by his good example."

Mr. McKenzie designated the way in which peace can be realized, pointing out that "when in a branch church growth has been made to the point that members respect one another and show deference and courtesy, work is done in friendliness. May not a time be coming," he asked, "when in congresses and parliaments good will of this sort will show like harmonies and results?

"Our Leader in her preface to 'Miscellaneous Writings' spoke of 'the spiritual glow and grandeur of a consecrated life wherein dwelleth peace, sacred and sincere in trial or in triumph.' Following her inspiring example, let us dignify this coming year by an endeavor 'to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace.'" (Ephesians 4:3).

As retiring President Dr. Frank C. Colby declared it "encouraging to find that Christian Scientists are realizing more fully and more keenly that Christian Science is something more than a glorified theology; that it is demonstrable Science; the Science of Being; the Science of true Christianity, that it is theology as well as Science. It is man's business to be absolutely obedient to divine Principle, God, to express, or exemplify, the nature of God. Thus he is both religious and scientific."

Following which he introduced Mrs. Elizabeth Cadwell Tomlinson as the new President of The Mother Church.

In her address, Mrs. Tomlinson spoke in somewhat the same vein as Mr. McKenzie, declaring that "the developments of this hour in world history are not disheartening to the thinker in Christian Science. These developments corroborate and fulfill our Leader's prophecy (Miscellany 281:28): 'War will end when nations are ripe for progress.' As humanity ripens in courage, in purity of purpose, in increasing virtue, in holiness, this ripening will hasten the day prophesied by our Leader when 'the Christ-spirit will cleanse the earth of human gore' (Miscellany 265:9). It is the life of men, not the death of men, that determnes the peace of nations."

Edward L. Ripley, re-elected Church Treasurer, expressed gratitude that the indebtedness of a year ago, resulting from the remodeling and refurnishing of the former publishing house to serve as the Church Administration Building, had been met in full through the active co-operation of the field together with the earnings of The Christian Science Publishing Society. "There is no debt of any kind on the new Publishing House and other property owned by The Mother Church or its affiliated trusteeships," he said.

Also re-elected was Ezra W. Palmer, Clerk of the Church. One of the prncipal duties of the Clerk and his co-workers is the handling of applications for membership in The Mother Church.

His report included information as well on the relief work done by the church. The Relief Fund of The Mother Church alleviated distress caused by hurricane in Florlida; by earthquake in Montana; continued work at the Veterans' Hospital, Oteen, N. C.; aided those whose property was damaged by tornado in Mississippi and North Carolina; and assisted sufferers from floods in southern and eastern states. Relief was dispensed among Christian Scientists and non-Christian Scientists in 14 states. In the course of this work assistance was given to or through a number of ministers of other denominations who have expressed much appreciation for the assistance and the spirit in which it was administered.

William M. Bartlett, Secretary to Trustees under the Will of Mary Baker Eddy, reported expenditure of more than $150,000 during the year just past, "to more effectually extend and promote the religion of Christian Science." This money went to aid churches and societies to erect or purchase their own buildings, for the free distribution of authorized literature for supplying literature in Braille for the blind, for aiding branches in paying for their first lecture, and in Germany, for assisting Christian Scientists there who would otherwise have been unable to receive authorized literature following certain restrictions made last August by the German Government.

William W. Davis, Executive Supervisor of Christian Science Charitable and Benevolent Institutions, reported increased guests at both the Pacific Coast and Chestnut Hill Sanatoriums as well as loyal support of the Pleasant View Home.

As Manager of Committees on Publication, C. Augustus Norwood declared, "We may well rejoice at the continued progress of our religion and the continued growth of our organization. But, when we consider how many years were required to leaven the thought of the world sufficiently to make it possible for our Leader, Mary Baker Eddy, to establish the religion and the organization of Christian Science, we must realize that the work of accomplishing her purpose to 'reinstate primitive Christianity and its lost element of healing' (Manual p. 17) has hardly more than begun."

Mr. Norwood disclosed that through the publication of religious items and the radiocasting of religious programs and news comments from The Christian Science Monitor, friendly relationships have been established with about 2000 newspapers and 300 radio stations. Through these contacts some 150,000 friendly and constructive news items were published, while more than 6000 religious programs and 60,000 radiocasts of Monitor news were put on the air during the year.

Miss Margaret Murney Glenn as chairman of the Board of Lectureship for the past year cited cases of instantaneous healings which had taken place as a result of public lectures on Christian Science.

She disclosed that members of the Board of Lectureship carried Christian Science messages to the four corners of the globe, delivering 3111 lectures with an attendance of approximately three million persons. Ten lectures were given in Africa, 59 in Australiasia, 17 in Hawaii, China, Japan, Java, Ceylon and India, one in the City of Mexico, 17 in South America, 9 in Bermuda, Canal Zone and West Indies, 225 in Great Britain and Ireland, 104 in continental Europe and Scandinavia, and 2669 in Canada, the United States and Iaska.

The fruitage of Christian Science in healing all manner of disease and disorder was attested in selected testimonials read by Mrs. Jennie H. Jarvis.

Speaking for the Publishing Society, Fred M. Lamson, Trustee, told the meeting that no publisher ever had a more responsive, enthusiastic and devoted public as partners in a great business, than those who purchase Christian Science literature. "We say with grateful hearts that it has been a good year," he said.

"Our business condition is satisfactory and there has been a healthy growth in advertising income, and in the subscription lists of all the periodicals.

"Many have inspected the new Publishing House, and in the last eleven months approximately 120,000 visitors came to view the new Mapparium, among them persons from many lands."

TAX PAYERS ATTENTION!

WATCH YOUR DISTRICT BUDGETS

The Civic League, the object of which is "to foster and promote by all lawful means the civic interests and well-being of the people of San Mateo County," respectfully suggests that all Taxpayers interest themselves at once in the preparation of the proposed 1936-37 budgets of the various Assessment Districts of the County, however such districts may be named. These budgets are being drawn, and are to be adopted prior to August 1st.

TAXES WERE LEVIED LAST YEAR IN 70 OF THESE DISTRICTS

Examination of your last County Tax Bill will inform you in which of these Districts you hold property, and will show you that the LARGEST PROPORTION of your Tax Bill paid at the Court House, is levied primarily by these Districts.

CONFER AT ONCE WITH THE TRUSTEES OR COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICTS IN WHICH YOU HOLD PROPERTY. Attend the meetings and investigate the purposes and amounts of the proposed levies. Ascertain why, in many instances LARGE CASH BALANCES ARE CARRIED OVER FROM YEAR TO YEAR—money which should be reflected in a LOWER TAX RATE this year.

District assessments were levied last year in the following classes:

SCHOOL	FIRE
SEWER	LIGHTING
WATER	UTILITY
POLICE	MOSQUITO ABATEMENT

Special Assessments, Various Kinds

Collectively these Districts carry over from year to year a very large amount of money, cash, in the County Treasury.

Those who initiate these District Assessments are your friends and neighbors, and have been elected BY YOUR VOTES.

Unquestionably your offers of aid, co-operation and counsel will be courteously received.

If Taxpayers will arouse from their apathy and seriously go into this subject, substantial reductions may be obtained and your tax bills materially reduced.

JUDGE COTTON IS ENDORSED BY LARGE GROUP

Files Papers Signed By Many Prominent Citizens In All Walks Of Life

Backed by endorsements and testimonials of leading members of the San Mateo County Bar Association, and prominent citizens from every section of the county, Judge Aylett R. Cotton filed nomination papers with County Clerk Elmore B. Hinman, Redwood City, Tuesday of this week, to succeed himself on the county superior bench at the August 25 primary election.

Outstanding members of the county bar, who practice law in Judge Cotton's court, publicly have announced their intention of actively supporting his candidacy, as have citizens prominent in county civic and public affairs.

JUDGE A. R. COTTON

APPOINTED TO BENCH

Judge Cotton was elevated to the bench February 5 of last year, following the sudden death of Judge Franklin Swart. He was appointed by Governor Frank F. Merriam, with strong popular support from every section of the county in a three-cornered contest for the office left vacant by Judge Swart's death. The term of superior judge is six years, but owing to the fact that Judge Cotton received a gubernatorial appointment, he is compelled by law to stand for election this year at the first general election since his appointment.

WAS FORMER MAYOR

When selected by Governor Merriam for one of the highest honors in the county, Judge Cotton was serving as Mayor of San Mateo, where he has been a resident for nearly 30 years. He has been engaged in the practice of law for nearly 40 years, having served in important legal posts during that time.

Judge Cotton's father as a youth crossed the plains from the Middle West to California during the gold rush in 1849, but later returned to Iowa, where he married and resided until after the birth of the county jurist in 1874. He represented his State as Congressman. In 1883 the Cotton family set out for California to establish the family home on the last American frontier. Judge Cotton received his early education in the public schools of San Francisco, and later attended the Belmont Military Academy, where he graduated in 1891.

After completing his studies at Belmont, he entered Stanford University the day that institution first opened its doors to become one of the greatest educational centers of the nation. He was the first student to complete the entire course at Stanford, and was graduated in 1894 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Following Stanford he entered Hastings Law College in San Francisco, and received his degree there in 1896, and immediately was admitted to the Bar.

PRACTICED LAW

He practiced law in San Francisco with his father, the late Judge Aylett R. Cotton. In 1900 he went to Manila to become law clerk and Spanish translator for the late William Howard Taft, former President of the United States, and former Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court. While residing in Manila he went to Washington, D. C. and was admitted to practice before the United States Supreme Court.

In 1904 he was made Mayor of Iloilo in the Philippine Islands, and served in that capacity until the late Theodore Roosevelt, fromer President of the United States, named him to the post of prosecuting attorney of the City of Manila. He held this post until 1907, when he returned home to establish himself again in private practice.

The same year, upon his return from the Philippines, he married Alice Borel, member of one of San Mateo County's best known families, and settled in San Mateo. In 1910 he was made Chief Assistant District Attorney of San Francisco, which post he held for 10 years, giving it up in 1920 to devote his entire time to his private practice. Judge Cotton continued his practice of the law until Governor Merriam elevated him to the Bench last year.

ACTIVE IN CIVIC LIFE

The jurist has taken an active part in civic and public affairs of the County and of the City of San Mateo, where he was elected to the City Council in 1927, and served for eight years, the last four of which he was Mayor.

Judge Cotton also has taken a prominent part in fraternal affairs, being a member of the Burlingame Lodge, No. 400, Free and Accepted Masons, Peninsula Scottish Rite Bodies, the San Mateo Elks Club, the Burlingame-San Mateo Kiwanis, La Fayette Club, Society of California Pioneers, Sons of the American Revolution, a charter member of the Borel Parent-Teachers Association of San Mateo, and other civic organizations.

He is a director of the Menlo School and Junior College, and in addition to his wife has one son, Aylett Borel Cotton, Stanford graduate, now taking a course in law at the Palo Alto University.

During his less than one year and a half incumbency on the San Mateo County Bench, Judge Cotton has handled more than 3000 cases, an average of more than 10 cases daily for the court year.

COUNTRY MUST HAVE PLANNED ECONOMY

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work

Day by day the Roosevelt policy of allowing the accomplishments of the administration to speak for themselves and giving plenty of opportunities for the opposition to make mistakes is bearing fruit. The people of the country realize the President is on the right road in attempting to bring order out of economic chaos and are almost solidly back of his plans.

A remarkable manifestation of the confused nature of the attack on the administration comes in the issuance of "stories" for the press by a group of college professors, who are supposed to be above sending out propaganda. The slant is all against the President, however.

In the Six Star Service, as it is called, we find, for example, two articles by Dr. Walter E. Spahr, of the Department of Economics, New York University, trying to rebuke President Roosevelt for advocating a wider distribution of wealth. An eye-opener is furnished by the circumstance that the expense of the service is met by the American Manufacturers Association. The American Manufacturers Association is one of the business groups that "hate" Roosevelt. The members approach the mad stage every time the imminence of planned economy is mentioned.

* * *

It is worth nothing that Stuart Chase, well known publicist, recently said:

"If the Liberty League is to have its way and economics planning is to be taboo, we may confidently expect the situation to worsen at something like a compound-interest rate, until America explodes."

* * *

Senator William E. Borah, one of the big figures of the Republican convention, is unalterably opposed to any declaration for returning to the gold standard. He points out nothing could be done tending to injure the agricultural interests of the country to a greater extent than going back to the gold standard. The well known Idahoan also declares that twenty-one governments of Europe which have abandoned the gold standard have reduced unemployment to a minimum.

* * *

A recent book, "Borah of Idaho," is interesting from more than one point of view. The Senator is seventy-two years old, but still able to battle for what he thinks is right. Frankly he must be classified as a strange combination of liberal and conservative. The author of the book, Claudius O. Johnson, admits he is baffled by the contradictory qualities of the statesman.

Johnson admires Borah and goes to some length to deny the Senator is a magnificent straddler, as he has sometimes been termed. One thing on which both Borah and Johnson agree is that Borah is inconsistent. Bluntly enough, Senator Borah has said on several occasions:

"I do not know that consistency is a virtue of any particular worth."

* * *

That Senator Borah bows to expediency at times is pointed out by author Johnson. For years Borah opposed the soldiers' bonus but finally yielded and voted for the bill to pay the veterans cash for their adjusted-pay certificates because the country needed a larger volume of currency, because Congress had long since agreed to pay the veterans, and because many veterans were in sore straits.

LINGERIE SHOWER FOR POPULAR GIRL

Miss Juanita Dunstan daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Dunstan of Mountain View, formerly of Mission street, Daly City, was guest of honor, Thursday evening of last week, at a lingerie shower given at the home of Mrs Jean Lynch on Parkview avenue by a group of relatves and friends.

The table was beautifully decorated in pink and blue crepe paper. The center piece was a parasol made of pnk and blue paper violets and each guest received as favors a corsage of pink and blue paper violets, a paper candy cup and parasol.

The evening was spent in playing games and dancing. About thirty-six guests were present.

Miss Dunstan, who received many lovely gifts, is to become the bride of Weston B. Long of San Diego on July 4 at Grace Nazarene Church.

EXPERIENCED HOUSEWIFE CLUB

(By Maude Larue Ives)

In his "Dissertation on Roast Pig" Charles Lamb tells the following story, to suggest how the art of cooking might have been discovered and he gives due credit to the Chinese. This is an excerpt: "Bo-bo, a llttle Chinese boy, accidentally set fire to his father's house and burned up several little pigs that were housed therein. On feeling of one of the sizzling bodies to see if it had any life remaining, he burned his fingers, and, naturally, thrust them into his mouth. To his astonishment, he found that the juicy pieces which stuck to his fingers were the most delicious food he had ever tasted, and as a result of his adventure roast pig and the knowledge of roasting became common throughout China."

The first member of our club is Mrs. S. White, 420 Irvington street, and should you desire to ask any questions regarding the recipe printed below, her telephone is Randolph 4681. It is a "Sweet Green Tomato Relish," and is delicious with "roast pig" (pork) or any other kinds of meat.

Sweet Green Tomato Relish

Ten pounds green tomatoes, chopped fine.

One pound green apples, grated.

A small head of celery and two pounds onions, chopped fine.

One half pound small black currants.

One package brown sugar.

Put enough vinegar and the brown sugar in large saucepan, together with mixed spice seed tied in a small cloth sack, also a sprnkling of cinnamon, cloves, allspice and nutmeg. Combine other ingredients and boil until the chopped fruits and vegetables become tender

"The proof of the pudding lies in the eating."

While cherries are in season, try this recipe. It should go over in a big way.

Cherry Steam Pudding

One egg, well beaten; one cup sweet milk; two cups flour (measure before sifting); one teaspoon baking powder; one tablespoon melted butter; one cup pitted cherries. Drain juice well from cherries. Combine inredients in the order given. Steam two hours in buttered dish.

Sauce—One cup sugar, one tablespoon corn starch, two cups cold water, one tablespoon butter, pinch of salt. Combine the corn starch with sugar, before adding water and butter. Boil until clear; after removing from stove, add one teaspoon vanilla and one cup cherry juice.

Bible selections will include the following passages from Luke 4: 14, 38, 39: "And Jesus returned in the power of the Spirit into Galilee: and there went out a fame of him through all the region round about . . . . And he arose out of the synagogue, and entered into Simon's house. And Simon's wife's mother was taken with a great fever; and they besought him for her. And he stood over her, and rebuked the fever; and it left her; and immediately she arose and ministered unto them."

A passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, will also be included, which reads as follows: "The history of Christianity furnishes sublime proofs of the supporting influence and protecting power bestowed on man by his heavenly Father, omnipotent Mind, who gves man faith and understanding whereby to defend himself, not only from temptation, but from bodily suffering" (p. 387).

"Stop fretting," Barry commanded "He'll be out in a month."

Barry's heart had gone out to Peggy and to her boy. A chorine with the domestic virtues of a clergyman's wife—that's what Peg was. "I'd like to give Pat a squint at the underdog she thinks she despises so," he thought.

The next morning there were two responses to the advertisement suggested by Evans. Barry wrote asking both applicants for the reward to call at his rooms. On the way to The Globe, he dropped in on Tim Laugherty.

Tim had been assigned to a new case now, and regarded the Kelly matter as a closed incident. Barry's zeal amused him. "What're you talking about?" he inquired with mock seriousness. "Kelly? We're at the Ziegfeld Follies, buddy."

Barry reported his interview with the Oriental.

Tim grinned; "We knew all about that ten days ago!"

He produced his records.

"There was a call at 8:16. That came from a hotel in the Forties—an actorine named Betty Barclay. Then there was three calls from Kelly's—at 8:22, 8:27 and 9:41. That first number's the house of a lawyer named Hood. Next comes the Yale club. And the third's a flat in Riverside drive."

"Whose?"

"I don't know."

"What about the call that came in while Rogers was there?"

"Boloney."

"You mean there wasn't any such call?"

"Not on my records. Of course, it might've been sent from a nickel-in-the slot booth. You can't trace them things. Listen, pal, you're on a wild goose chase. This Rogers lad done it."

CHAPTER VI

Barry proceeded to The Globe, quite expecting to find his dismissal there.

"I'm going to draw down fifty bucks," he thought, "and what have I done for it?

But Ernie Harwood had caught the contagion for "sleuthing."

"The other papers have practically dropped it," he said. "Okay. We'll go on working quietly, and, some day, we'll turn up the story. It's good any time. And I'm dead sure now the cops have got the wrong party. Maybe they know it, too. Maybe they don't want to know who bumped off the big boss. What're you doing?"

Barry told him.

"Let's see those telephone numbers."

Standing over him, Barry pointed out that somebody had made two calls from Kelly's within eleven minutes after the receipt of the message from Betty Barclay. Harwood saw nothing remarkable about that. "But," Barry persisted, "who was 'somebody?' Kelly didn't get home till 11, the Filipino says. Mrs. Kelly was in Harlem. Who called the Yale club, and the flat on Riverside drive?"

Harwood sent for a newspaper file.

"I thought so," he observed, his finger on one of its pages. "Betty Barclay's the dame Mrs. Kelly named when she was going to divorce Kelly."

Barry whistled.

"That might explain Mrs. Kelly calling a lawyer named Hood."

The city editor glanced back at the file.

"Especially since he was her lawyer. Gimme that big red book."

Barry obeyed.

Hood. Graduated from Yale. He wasn't at home, so they tried to get him at his club. Law firm: Hood & Loring. Gimme the telephone book. Just a hunch, but—Okay. The Riverside number's the home of Horace Loring. Somebody wanted legal advice that night, and wanted it bad."

"Who?"

"Use your imagination."

"Mrs. Kelly?"

"Sure. She took the call from Betty Barclay—"

"She didn't. The butler took it."

"All right. Then he gave it to her, and she went wild. You want to know why the Oriental's 'cagey.' Well, that's why. He's trying to shield Mrs. Kelly. What you've got to do now is to check up on that alibi."

They discussed ways and means. Also, they discussed Barry's other activities. Barry showed Ernie his advertisement, and the two responses. Harwood was skeptical.

"We might get the number of the taxi that killed the woman. What then? That was two hours after the murder. And, if you have the good fortune to get the taxi—the one that brought the midnight caller to Kelly's, if there was a midnight caller—how's the driver going to know who his fare was? No, son; that's beettops!"

Barry defended himself.

"You never can tell what you're going to get till you go after it."

Harwood was searching for that inevitable pipe.

"You're enthusiastic," he commented, "and that's something. In fact, it's everything. I figure getting anywhere as 5 per cent luck and 95 per cent enthusiasm. Now, beat it. I'm too busy for mathematics."

He smiled, almost as warmly and kindly as Winslow had done.

"You've got a nose for news," he went on. "When I hired you, I said you'd get a raise if you were worth it, and fired if you weren't. Well, I think you're worth a hundred a week."

"That's swell of you," Barry glowed, "but I don't see what I've done—"

Wednesday brought the desired letter from Bad Nauheim, and three more from gentlemen who hoped to receive the fifty-dollar reward. With these, as with their predecessors, Barry made appointments beginning at four o'clock Thursday. Mrs. Ridder's envelope contained a check drawn to her order by "the old man," and endorsed simply "Eleanor Ridder." "She's a good business woman," Barry said to himself, ironically.

It hadn't occurred to her to doubt the sender of that cablegram, or what he meant to do with the money. "Winslow'll take it," Barry told Peggy, "and take his retainer out of it. Then he can give us his check for the rest. Winslow's name'll be on this check when it's returned to the old man, and, of course, that's all right."

"What'll we do with Winslow's check?"

"Start a bank account in your name. Then I'll go to you when we need funds, and tell you what for. Give this letter to Jack, and tell him it ought to make him ashamed of himself."

It almost did. Even more than the communication Barry had shown him, this answered Jack's question as to whether his mother cared. "I'm so glad you've got work," she had written, "and so glad you're taking an interest in that boy. It shows I've always been right about you. And it will help you, too. We can't help others without helping ourselves—making character. I want to boast—to your father. He's no better, though. Worse, if anything. Goodness knows when we shall get back to America, and I'm so anxious to get back—now!"

The real Jack Ridder answered that letter without prompting, and the "fake" Jack Ridder posted the answer.

At three Thursday afternoon, he was in his rooms, preparing to quiz the reward-seekers. Barry had reason to know the ways of imposters.

The first caller was just that. "I was walking down Fifth avenue," he recounted, "and I happened to glance to my left. I saw the cab coming, lickety-split—"

"To your left?" Barry asked. "That would have been east. And Sixteenth street's for traffic from the west."

The second applicant was waiting by now—a lunch-counter clerk who'd run out of his place "to see what the excitement was about," but hadn't seen much. On his heels, came an exceptionally interesting Jehu. He was an M. D., he told Barry, "but business is bad, so I'm out to make a little."

"A little business?" Barry asked.

"Well, I haven't hit anyone yet."

He was thirty-five, neatly dressed, and wore glasses, and his English was pure and undefiled. Moreover, he had a scientific instinct for observation. "I saw the taxi," he said, "and the woman step off the curb. I knew the cab would hit her, and it did."

"Get the number?"

"Of course," the visitor answered. "Took it down as the runaway crossed in front of me."

He produced a prescription pad.

"O26017."

Barry wrote it in the note-book to which he had transferred the number of Kelly's lost latch-key.

"How did you happen to be in lower Fifth avenue at that hour?" he asked.

"I went down—some time before—with a very singular person."

"Why do you say he was singular?"

"He acted strangely. At least, I thought so at the time. I picked him up in a tobacconist's shop a few minutes before twelve o'clock. 'Where do you want to go?' I asked him.

"'To a drug store,' he answered. "There's one in the Flatiron building, at Broadway and Twenty-third street. Take me there.'

"It seemed a long way to go for a drug store, but I supposed he knew someone, or wanted a special prescription. Anyway, it was none of my business, and I took him. He gave me a fifty-cent tip, and went into the Broadway entrance. Five minutes later, while I was wondering where to go next, I saw him walk out of the door that opened on Fifth avenue. I started back uptown.

"About half past one, I picked up a couple that wanted to go to the Brevoort, on Eighth street. I took 'em, and was making for Times square again when the traffic lights stopped me at Sixteenth. Then I saw the woman and the cab. The whole thing was over in a minute. The taxi struck her, went right up on the pavement, smashed a lamp-post, and kept going. But I got the number."

"Then, of course, I jumped out of my cab and went to the woman. She was beyond help, though. And, by this time, a policeman had turned up, and I decided to move on." He smiled. "A taxi-driver learns to avoid the constabulary."

"So you didn't give the cop that license number?"

"What for? The woman was dead, and arresting some poor, scared taximan wasn't going to do her any good. I started back to my cab, and whom should I bump into but the chap I'd driven to the drug store. He was coming out of Sixteenth street, so lost in himself that he hadn't even noticed the crowd. 'Hello,' I said. 'We seem to be meeting a lot tonight.'

"'Who are you?' he asked, curtly.

"'I'm the taxi-driver who took you to a drug store on Twenty-third street a couple of hours ago.'

"'I never saw you before in my life. You've made a mistake,' he said. 'I live in this street, and I've been home all evening. You never drove me anywhere.'

"'Have it your own way,' I said, and climbed into my buggy.

"I wasn't mistaken, and neither was he. He was in kind of a daze until he recognized me, and then he got almost hysterical. You'd've thought I'd accused him of murder."

The doctor rose from his chair.

"Maybe I'm doing that," he added. "There was a murder that night, you know; in that street. But, of course, you kr-w. Your ad didn't fool me."

"Then why did you answer it?"

"Well, my conscience has been hurting me a little." He smiled again.

"Who Are You?" He Asked Curtly.

"That's my number, and my name and address, if you want me."

"There's your fifty dollars."

"Thanks."

"I wish you could tell me more about your singular fare."

"I wish so, too, but I can't. I'd know him if I saw him again, but I'm not likely to see him."

"Would you mind leaving me a receipt for that money?" Barry asked.

"Certainly not."

"I like to have vouchers for what I pay out."

The doctor nodded, and went to the desk.

Barry was halted by an exclamation.

"What is it?" he asked.

The doctor turned to him.

"That's the man I saw in Sixteenth street," he said. "Believe it or not, that's the man."

In his hand was Barry's newspaper, with the picture of Judge Hambidge.

"I must see Pat at once," Barry thought.

What was he going to say to her? Six days before, she had given him a pretty plain warning to keep out of this. Barry no longer had any doubt of that. He had decided to do so, and then Willetts had reminded him that gentlemen didn't "abandon ladies in distress." Well, what was a gentleman to do now?

"Damn it," he raged; "I can't blame her for wanting to protect her own father! And it doesn't make the least difference, anyway. I'd go on loving her if she'd committed the murder!"

Once more, he asked himself what right he had to assume that either Pat or the Judge had anything to do with that murder. Pacing the floor, he reviewed all his evidence again, and reached a conclusion as to what it indicated. That brought him back to the idea of himself as Pat's ally. "If I can make her see that," he said. "She's got to come clean, though. And she will. When I can tell her about Peggy, and make her understand that the truth will clear that boy. And then we can get together to clear the Judge. There might have been a whole lot of reasons—decent ones—for his going to Kelly's that night."

Evans phoned at ten.

"I've been having dinner with Kelly's chauffeur. His name's Nolan," Evans said, "and he don't talk much. We got pretty thick tonight, though."

"Suppose we start for home at nine in the morning," Barry said.

He was hungry, and tired of thinking, so he had a snack at the corner.

Precisely at nine the next morning, he called Pat and told her he was coming. "Something important's happened," he said.

"Why not lunch with us?" Pat suggested.

"We're lucky if we get out by two," Barry told her. "And, anyway, I want to see you alone."

"I'll expect you at two," she said.

Evans was waiting, and full of his evening with Nolan. "I didn't dare ask a question," Evans reported. "He's the suspicious kind. I think he drinks, though, and a fellow that drinks is bound to loosen up some day."

"Buy him all he can hold," Barry counseled.

Conversation lapsed after that. Evans' passenger was rehearsing his part of the coming interview. "I'll bet she knows now what it's about," he speculated.

And she did.

"Come in," Pat invited, leading the way to the drawing room.

Pat indicated a chair. "Sit there," she bade him. "It's awfully warm—for June."

OPEN CIRCUIT CAUSE

Loose or defective electrical connections may cause an intermittent open circuit, with the circuit complete at times and open at others.

One difficult cause to locate is a broken wire inside the insulation. If the electrical equipment of the car operates intermittently it is advisable to make a thorough examination of all connections and wiring for the source of the trouble.

EYESIGHT IS PRICELESS

The Better Sight table lamp pictured to the left gives you generous light over the entire surface of table and desk. In addition it throws enough light upward and throughout the room to get rid of eye-straining shadows.

LIGHT that is safe for grown-up eyes is not always safe for children's eyes. Young eyes are still growing; gaining strength. That is why eyestrain caused by reading or studying in poor light may lead to eye trouble in later years. Proper lighting helps healthy eye development just as proper food builds sturdier bodies.

The new Better Sight lamps give ample, soft, diffused light that promotes comfortable seeing and protects eyesight. Buy one of these better lamps today.

Check up on the lighting in your home. Fill the empty sockets and replace old lamps with new so that you will always have good light when you read or study.

★ ★ ★

Good light never was so cheap. Lamp bulbs today are twice as efficient—give twice as much light as they did in 1921. And they cost 66% less. Then, too, the Reduced Electric Rates mean Good Lighting is Cheaper than ever before.
